1. What is an example of a positive emotion and how can you create space for them?

2. Do you typically find yourself able to scan for positives through your day?